If there is any possible device left un-employed to vary the styles in winter costumes it must figure among new inventions, for every old-time idea is certainly in competition. Smocking, plain piping, puff sleeves and ruffles all play a part in the composition of madam's fashions on outfit, while short or medium length trimmings are fashionable. Even the women who prefer gowns of more severe order.

A hotel now let me command the woman who chooses the latter style if her wardrobe allowance is too limited to furnish her many gowns.

Great is the variety of woolens suitable for the "general wear" frock, and of braids, embroidery and applique bands there seems to be no end, notwithstanding braids being particularly popular. Braided braid and pendant abounds in all possible shapes.

And such a number of capes are worn! Made of cloth, velvet, fur and every conceivable material. The old-fashioned shoulder-cape is in favor again, rivalling the pointed and pelorus shapes.

The exceptionally stunning model of the trim tailor-made variety which I have illustrated for you, was made for young matron prominent in New York's "smart set." Built of a brownish mixed Scotch cheviot, and smartly trimmed with a scroll-like design in brown silk braid, it shows admirably the most practical type of gown for various occasions.

Another excellent design for general wear is shown of black brocade with panels of the same extending nearly to the bottom of the skirt, and edged with a very satiny appearing black and white mixed braid. With it is worn a dainty peau de crepe blouse of the shirt-waist

Mr. Warren M. Layman, of 288 Pine Street, Holyoke, Mass., was at Claremont, N. H., on Dec. 3, 1902. "Angeline (anxiously)—Are you sure, dear, that you don't regret it and that you don't sometimes miss your life as a bachelorette?"

"Edwin (with cheerful conviction)—Not a bit. I tell you what, Angy, I miss it so little that if I were to lose you—I'm blessed if I wouldn't marry again."

"The Safer Method."

"Say, I began the first morn, nibbling his gen'—"How do you spell 'glibbering' with a 'g' or a 'k'?"

"I don't spell it at all," replied the other. "When I want to call a man that sort of an idiot I just say it. I'm not fool enough to put it in writing!"—Washington Star.

question of farm help was becoming worse than better and the determination had been reached to get out of farming and get into something else sooner than was in the air of the return of the bodies of multi-part horses into long waisted Farm Help.

There is no question that the subject of farm help is becoming one of the most serious ones for this section. The Comptroller last year gave reports from different portions of the country which indicated about one hundred thousand to account to present information is an increase rather than a decrease.

Why a successful farmer was here a short time ago to advocate the Chinese Exclusion Act ought to be said to add to any Chinaman who would make his business a farm labor. Others advocate that the size of our farms should be reduced to an acreage that one man could successfully handle.

Municipal Lighting.

At present there is a good deal of talk in town on the lighting question: The idea seems to be possessed by a few that municipal lighting is the thing. Many more contend that it has been a failure wherever tried. It is a fact established beyond question or dispute that a municipality has never been able to run any plant on the economical basis that a corporation can. The operation by a corporation is at a minimum of expense and gets out of the way of all difficulties.

This is management under a single head: to bring about this result. When municipalities operate there is no one head, there are too many bosses, there is a difference to the opinion of too many in the management and operation. The result is one failure after another, just as in Chambersburg now they are seeking to find some one to take the whole elephant of an electric plant off the hands of the brought. There are those who assert that not a single owner of real estate would be in favor of municipal ownership. Others say the to have never made a stome crusher pay, how could they manage an expensive electrical plant? Still others say the town authorities should give what we have not got, a sewerage system the most pressing public necessity.

The Secret of Happiness.

Young Mr. Bond, whose experience of married life had been brief and happy, had just engaged two servants, a man and his wife, for work at his place.

"I am so glad you are married!" she said to the man, with whom she had made terms. "I hope you are very happy, and that you and your wife never have any difference of opinion."

"Faith, ma'am, Ol' couldn't say that," replied the new servant, "for we have a good manny, but Ol' don't let Bridget know of this, and so we do be getting along well."

Dr. William McLaughlin, of No. 542 South Duke street, Lancaster, Pa., says he has been giving out a house to a retired carriage master. It was constantly taking cold, and it always did when he took it up. Dr. McLaughlin, however, found that he might be able to remove the trouble by having a pipe inserted in the pocket of his trousers, was withdrawn, and I knew my purse had gone with it. I listened till I heard a faint sound which I knew was the closing of the door, then turning over, I went to sleep."

My grandfather, as I have said, told me the story a great many times, though I never heard it before having had it all. And I think that at this point he expected me to express his surprise that he could take the loss of his purse so coolly.

"Grandfather," I said, "how could you go to sleep so easily?"

"Well, boy, I had escaped with my life, and that made me feel very comfortable."

"Go on, grandfather."

"The next morning I rose early, made some inquiries about my comrade of the day before, but when the landlord told me he had gone at daylight I didn't manifest any surprise or disappointment. I feared he might be in trouble with the police, and I had no excuse to detain me. Fortunately I had the ten dollar bill the thief had given me with which to pay him for my keeping, and took it so readily, without examining it, that I knew he was better than the black tea we had brought. We thought it was dried and sold in the stores, and we sometimes added its flavor to tea at home."
